HOGG TO CONDUCT JOINT MEETING

County Agent Offers Suggestions For The Production of Sweet Cream

TWO HELD IN DAYLIGHT BANK ROBBERY

SWEET CREAM BEST MARKET

BY J. A. BARTON
Cows pay twice a week and will yield a certain profit. Provided you have good cows, use proper feed and management, and a market for dairy products.

Since the coming of the white man to Texas, it has been up to recently a beef producing State, but the times are changing. Large ranches and ranges are being cut up into farms, and just as rapidly cities are springing up all around us, which brings about more numerous dairy cows and the demand for her product. In the last 50 years the population of Texas has increased 500 per cent and the increase in dairy cows only 50 per cent. That is one of the reasons why Texas imports between ten and eleven million dollars worth of butter per year.

Now no doubt we have a market for our cream, butter, milk, right here in our own home state so it is only left to us to supply this market right at our door.

Generally the native Texan has been a beef producer, and not a dairyman. Now to get the dairyman view point we must study along a little different line and figure those things that go to make profit in dairying.

It is the belief of those who are the best informed on dairying in this county that dairying can be made a part of a well balanced farm program, and not a major project. To do this the practice of keeping from five to ten good cows and secure a sweet cream market, where cream can be sold and the skimmed milk kept on the farm to feed to chickens, turkeys, hogs and calves.

The old saying the best way to go into any business is to grow into it, and this holds good in the dairy business. In the dairy sections the man who has been successful was the one who started out in a small way and gradually worked up with a start of from three to five cows breeding to a registered bull of known production records. These foundation cows should not be below 9000 pound milk and 300 pound butter fat per year. A profit cannot be

COUNTY COURT JURORS DRAWN

The following is the jury list announced for the June term of County Courts, which will meet in the County Court room, Monday June 27. The court was to have met the third Monday in June, but was postponed one week on account of Judge Luker being called to Austin on official business.

The list: T. R. Homsley, Aron Massingill, B. F. McGlothlin, J. E. Burt, N. F. Williams, I. B. Clemons, D. H. Isham, J. R. Eanes, and Neely Burton all of Comanche; F. C. Wagon and C. M. Houser of Sipe Springs; and Jake Mimms of Carlton, Route 1.

Moving To New Location

J. H. Huff will shortly occupy one half of the N. W. Story Building now occupied by the Gas Company on the south side of the square and will move his business there about the first of next month. The building is being remodeled.

Mr. Huff will operate an exclusive jewelry and optometry business. He states that he will have more attractive quarters in his new location and will enlarge both his jewelry as well as his optometry business.

New fixtures will also be added in Hamilton's Drug store to occupy the space formerly occupied by Mr. Huff.

GUNMEN ROB ZEPHYR BANK

A lone masked bandit robbed the First State Bank at Zephyr, at 11 o'clock Tuesday morning of about $1,200 in cash, while a companion waited outside in a small touring car, in which the pair escaped.

The bandit entered the bank while D. A. Johnston, assistant cashier was alone and commanded him to hand over his cash. Johnston hid part of the money behind a pile of books as he appeared to obey the robber.

Johnston said that the bandit was clothed in overalls and wore a handkerchief over his face. The two outlaws escaped in the direction of Mullin, east of Zephyr.

Judge J. O. Woodward recalled the Brown county grand jury in special session to investigate the robbery Thursday. District Attorney Walter U. Early has issued subpoenas for a large number of witnesses to appear before the jury.

Chalmer Jasper and Jim Garvin, who were arrested Tuesday afternoon, were quizzed by the District and County Attorneys during the afternoon, and then lodged in the Brown County jail pending further investigation. No charges have been filed against the two men.

According to a Zephyr man, who was only a few feet from the bank when the lone masked bandit came out of the bank and jumped into the waiting automobile the following account of the robbery was obtained:

The bandit, who was dressed in blue overalls and blue jumper, wearing a cap and a black mask over his face, came out of the bank with a sack of money over his shoulder and a big pearl handled pistol in one hand. As soon as the man got in the car the witness stated that he yelled as loud as he could that the bank had been robbed and then rushed over to the bank to see about Johnston who had been forced into the vault. Later, the witness, whose name is withheld at his request, stated that he rushed to the telephone office and notified Sheriff White. Soon a posse of citizens was formed and rushed off in pursuit of the bandit pair, who left Zephyr headed towards Mullin.

J. C. Grant To Be C. H. S. Principal

John C. Grant of Dublin was elected by the school board this week as principal of Comanche High School for the next term. Mr. Grant holds both a bachelor's and master's degree from the University of Texas and for the last two years has been superintendent of schools at Florence, Texas.

Mr. Grant made a good record at Florence and succeeded in building up the school to a first class affiliated institution. Mr. Grant is a live wire and the school board is to be congratulated on securing his service. Superintendent Barrett stated that the faculty was now complete with the exception of athletic coach and Latin teacher in the high school.

Is To Be County-Wide In Scope

One of the greatest meetings ever held in Central West Texas is being planned for Comanche County. While it will be known as a Comanche County meeting, it is the plan of those who have the meeting in charge, not to limit its scope to the people of this county, but will include those of the town and communities of the surrounding counties.

The meeting will be held at the Tabernacle in Comanche, beginning Sunday evening July the third and will continue until results have been produced.

Will Hogg of Memphis, Tennessee, one of the best known evangelists throughout the entire south has been secured to lead the services.

Samuel J. Tilden Williams, advance agent for the meeting arrived in Comanche Tuesday and immediately began to lay plans for what he said he believes will be a meeting such as this section of the state has not witnessed in many years.

Mr. Williams said that he felt that the conditions in this county were just right for a great spiritual awakening and the response that he was already getting from the committee and from the people he met greatly encouraged him. Accordingly he is laying plans to organize the people of Comanche and Comanche County so as to reach every section the surrounding territory.

Mr. Williams further said that while the meeting will be held at Comanche it is a Comanche meeting and it is just as much for the people of Sidney, De Leon, Vandyke or any other section of the county as it is for Comanche and said this is the first idea he wishes to sell to the people of the County.

The people in the different towns and communities will be organized and have a delegation at each service. In addition to this each community will have a special service for that section when it is hoped that the entire citizenship will attend in a body. The plan is thoroughly to advertise the meeting in every section of the county and get the people ready for the meeting.

People have to think, plan, and pray for a meeting in advance. Mr. Williams said, just as a business man has to plan his business. System and organization and a general plan to accomplish something definite will characterize the whole meeting according to those who have the arrangements in charge.

Within an hour after Mr. Williams arrived he began talking to the business men and at four o'clock held a meeting with a committee of church men.

A general mass meeting was held Wednesday evening at the Baptist church and plans for the meeting were further arranged. Mr. Williams stated that in addition to Evangelist Will Hogg and himself the party would include Howard Goodpastor, director of music, and Miss Bessie Rice, pianist and director of young peoples work. Mr. Goodpastor, Mr. Williams said, was a real leader of singing and music will be one of the special features of the service.

Those who have the meeting in charge will be very busy between now and the opening date getting the interest aroused and the organization perfected. The real work, Mr. Williams stated, must be done by the home ministers and the home people and the party will assist in its direction.

Mr. Williams was accompanied on his visit here by his wife.

The Committee is in charge of general arrangements is given below and special committees named at the mass meeting will be published next week.

SICKLY, PEEVISH CHILDREN

Children suffering from intestinal worms are cross, restless and unhealthy. There are other symptoms, however. If the child is pale, has dark rings under the eyes, bad breath and takes no interest in play, it is almost a certainty that worms are eating away its vitality. The surest remedy for worms is White's Cream Vermifuge. It is positive destruction to the worms but harmless to the child. Price 35c. Sold by

Long Troubled by Constipation

"Black-Draught has been a family medicine with us for fifteen years," says Mr. F. M. Huntley, of Neosho, Mo. "I read about it first in the Ladies Birthday Almanac and what I read there sounded so convincing I made up my mind to try Black-Draught, as I had been troubled with constipation for a long time."

"I found Black-Draught to be the ideal medicine for this trouble. It gave me quick relief. Frequently I had had headaches and pains, due to toxic poison. By taking a course of Black-Draught I gave my system a thorough cleansing, and I have had little or no trouble since then."

"Now, if I am becoming constipated, I take several small doses of Black-Draught, and am very soon feeling fine."

Costs only 1 cent a dose.

pillow and jerked out a fire-blackened mess-kit. He wrenched the lid off and snarled horribly. "Empty, by God!"

His hands fell lax across his knees. He looked sadly over the blasted fields of Torcy, and he said, with the cold bitterness of a man who has tried it all and come to a final conclusion: "War—sure—is hell."

There were places like this down in the Touraine country, around the town Amiens called St. Onien. Canals with poplars mirrored in them, where it was pleasant to loaf at the end of the day. The women were kindly and disposed to make friends; it is a pity that there were not enough to go around. They had, also, an eye for corporals and sergeants; the bored privates on the bank, sentimental souls, are singing "Sweet A-de-line."

"or it may be something very different. The sergeant, a sensitive spirit, will presently see that they get some extra police duty."

CHAPTER X

The Rhine.

The bugles went while it was still as dark as the inside of a dog. There was swearing and sickly yellow candle-light in the billets, mean houses in a mean little Rhine-Provence town, and the chow lines formed on the company galley in an icy December rain. The rain pattered on helmets and mess-kits, and fell in slanting lines through the smoky circles of light where the cooking-fires burned feebly.

The faces of the marines, as they filed out of the dark for food, were gray and frowsy. The cooks issued corn-bill hash, and dared any man to growl on the coffee. How the hell could it be billed enough, with wet wood and very little of that—been up all night, as it is—you sports just pull in your necks!

The companies gulped their ration in sullen silence, rolled damp blankets into the prescribed pack, and when the bugles squawked assembly, they fell in without confusion or enthusiasm. Platoon sergeants, with flash lights or lanterns, called the rolls; somewhere out in front, first sergeants received the reports; officers clumped along the lines to their units, grumbling—"All here, first sergeant?"—"Beg the capt'n's pardon—couldn't see you in the dark, sir— all present-counted-for, sir!" "Nice day for a hike. Major says, goin' to the Rhine today. Eighteen or twenty kilometers—don't know exactly. Dam' such a war! I'd like the old kind, where you went into winter quarters—Brrr—" The captain pulled his collar around his ears.

Presently a bad-tempered drawling voice bayed "Squads right—march!" There was a shuffle of hobnails in the mud, and the rattle of rifle-slides. The first battalion of the Fifth marines took the road.

These German roads were all honestly metalled, but the inch or so of mud on the surface was like soup underfoot, and the overcoats soaked up the rain like blotting-paper. It was the kind of a morning with no line between night and daylight. The blackness turned to gray, and, after a while, the major, on his horse, could look back and see the end of his column. The battalion, he reflected, was up to strength again. It hadn't been this large since it went to Blanc Mont, the end of September.

He shut his eyes on that thought—a hundred and thirty men that came out, where a thousand went in—then replacements, and, after the armistice, more replacements. Perhaps the quality was running down a little.

Men Walked Silent, Remembering the Old Dead.

The new chaps didn't seem as tall and broad as the old men, the tall, sunburnt leathernecks that went out the road from Meaux, toward Chateau-Thierry, in the spring.

Odd, just six months since the spring. . . . But a few veterans and hard drilling between fights would keep the temper in an outfit. . . . one remembered a phrase in an order of the division commander's—"The Second division has never failed to impose its will upon the enemy. . . ." And today it crossed the German Rhine. . . . He swung out of his saddle and stood by the road to watch them pass; 1,200 men, helmets and rifles gleaming a little in the wet gray light.

The road led eastward through a country of low hills, sodden in the rain. Untidy clouds sprawled on the crests and spilled wet filaments into the valleys. The land was all in cultivation, laid out in precise squares and oblongs; some newly plowed, some sparsely green with turnips and rape. It looked ugly and ordered and sullenly prosperous. There was slow conversation in the column.

"Anybody know where we goin' today?" "Damfino—now—I did hear the skipper's orderly say we'd make the Rhine, some time—" "How far—" "Some guy was lookin' at a map at battalion. Said it was about thirty kilometers in this dam' country—" "Yeh! But I remember one time it was twelve kilometers. The night we hiked up to Verdun, back last March. Had a Frawg guide—little shrimp wit' a forked beard. Ask him how far, all he'd say was: 'Dooz kilometers—dooz kilometers—'"

"Hiked all night in the rain, like this, an' at daylight we came to a sign, wit' the name of the place we're goin' to, an' it said 'Dooz kilometers'—that guide, he let on that he was right surprised—" But there were very few men in the column who remembered the hike to Verdun, in the early spring of 1918; in one company eight, in another eleven; in the whole battalion the barest handful. It had been a long road. The first way-station was the Bois de Belleau; a lot of people stopped there, and were there yet. And there were more, comfortably rotting in the Forêt de Retz, south of Soissons. And more yet, well dead around Blanc Mont. And a vast drift of them back in hospitals. Men walked silent, remembering the old dead. . . . Twelve hundred men hiking to the Rhine, and how many ghosts. . . . The mist rolled around the column.

"You replacements never knew Corporal Snair, that got bumped off at Soissons, dailin' with a Maxim gun. He was a musical cuss, an' he uster sing a song to the tune of the 'Old Gray Mare—She Ain't What She Uster Be—somethin' like —and now it is, an' it's a pity he ain't here to see it—" "Well, but he's restin' easy where he is—me, I'm cold as hell an' this dam' drizzle is drainin' down my neck—"

"The U. S. flag will fly over Germany Less than a year from now—"

There was nothing but the mist and the rain, and a mean, cold little wind with a bite in it. North and south, from the edge of Holland to the Metz gateway, all the armies were marching. Ahead, just out of contact, went the German armies. The battalion passed a dense little wood of fir—Christmas-tree woods, the battalion called them.

This clump showed unmistakably that it had been a camp; but there was no litter; the Boche who bivouacked there had left it neat and clean. Along the road in orderly piles were some hundreds of the round German helmets, and parked precisely in a cleared place, where horse-lines had been, was a battery of 105 field howitzers. The old Boche was jettisoning what he didn't need. The battalion observed and was thoughtful.

"What about the ole Boche?—You think he was licked enough?" "No, I don't. That stuff back there, they laid it down under orders, like they do everything. It's stacked—it ain't just thrown away. An' look how they police up behind themselves—" "Yeh! Remember the other day, when we was advance-guard, we could see their rear-guard, sometimes—perfect order, an' all that—not like a defeated outfit, at all!" "Sure! I hope to spit in yo' mess-kit it ain't! An' those little towns back yonder, with the arches an' the flags and the welcome returnin' heroes stuff—none o' that was for us—" "They ain't licked enough. Look at this country—winter plowin' done—everything ship-shape—no shell-holes—no barb' wire—who in hell won this war, anyway?"

"You said it. We oughter got up in here an' showed the ole Boche what it was like, to have a war in his own yard." "Well, I've been in all of it, an' personally I was glad when the shootin' stopped. I got me some sleep an' a full belly, an' a pair of new shoes—an' some fireman's underwear, too. An' I was right proud not to be killed. I ain't prepared to die—" "We know you ain't, sergeant—we know—" "Aw, belay that—I mean, I was glad, myself, but we oughter gone on—oughter've finished it while we was at it. He wasn't licked enough, an' now he's goin' home like a peacock wit' seven tails—"

This was the consensus of opinion, delivered with consideration in the rain. The replacements, especially those who had joined up after the armistice, in Belgium, were savagely regretful. The chaps who had come in after Champagne, and been among those present at one fight, were bloodthirsty, but to a lesser degree. Only the veterans were entirely calm.

The rain fell, the road grew heavier. The battalion, soaked and miserable, plodded on. They passed through many villages, all alike; all ugly and without character. The houses were closed and shuttered. You saw few people, but you always had the feeling of eyes behind the shutters. One thick-bodied Boche, in uniform—an artilleryman, by his leather breeches—stood in the doorway of a house, smoking a porcelain pipe that hung to his knee. His face was set in a cast of hate. He stood and stared, and the battalion, passing, looked him over with respect.

"Understand a bird like that." "Yeh—he's honest. Those dam' Heinies in the billet last night, they made me sick. That fellow that talked English. Says he was glad his American friend's, present by agreement in the Rhineland, to welcome—says that to me, an' would the Herr Soldier like a good cup of coffee?" "Dam' his remarks—how 'bout the coffee?" "Well, it tasted funny, but it was hot." "Old guy at our billet gave us some cognac. Hot stuff! He didn't let on, though.—You know those trick certificates a soldier's family gets in Germany?—Colored picture like a Croi' Guerre certificate, shows a fat, beer-drinkin' Heinie angel standin' over a dead Boche—signed Wilhelm I. P.—you know."

"Well, this bird had six of them in his front room, all framed on the wall. I gathered they was his sons. Four bumped off at Verdun in 1916. One very recent—Soissons, July.—Wonder if we met that fella? He stood there an' looked at me while I was readin' them, an' he looked like a wolf. I don't blame him. But how come he gave us the cognac?—?" Later the battalion learned that the Boche had orders to be hospitable. . . .

Toward noon the clouds lifted, and the rain slowed to a thin drizzle, although it did not stop. The battalion filed between hills toward a great valley, dimly seen. The hills towered over them, dark, menacing—"No wonder the ole Boche has such a mean disposition, livin' in a country like this—" The battalion came into a town with paved streets and trolley-cars and tall factory chimneys that did not smoke. Platoon commanders said it was Remagen; those towers to the right would be the bridge. There was a bridge, a great steel structure of high black arches. The battalion filed upon it. Under it black water flowed swiftly, with surges and eddies dimpled by the rain. High rocky hills came down out of the mist on the farther side.

"So this is the Rhine," remarked the battalion. "Hell!" A few files were interested. A lank Texan said: "I don't see much to make a fuss about. You boys ever see the Trinity in overflow time? Ten miles from bank to bank, in the McKenzle Bend country—why, we'd call this a creek down where I come from—" "Naw, it ain't much river—an' no more is your dam' Trinity! I was raised in Sent Louie—Ole Miss'sip, now—" "Well, rivers in this country are mainly over-touted. That Marne, it wouldn't be much more'n a branch, down South. I never saw that there Vesle river, but a guy in the Thirty-second division, that was with me in Neully, he says you could mighty near jump across it." "Heard anything about chow?"—Galleys went on ahead awhile ago—when do we eat—"

For four years no hostile troops with arms in their hands had seen this river; only sad files of prisoners had crossed it, under German guard. The battalion turned right on the eastern bank and went up the river, on a broad road between a cliff and the swift black water. There were many houses, a continuous town. It was past noon of a Friday, the 13th December, and the Boche school-children were out. They gathered to look at the passing column. The marines eyed them keenly.

These kids were different. They did not point or talk or cry out, after the manner of children. They stood in stolid groups, wooden-faced, with unwinking pale-blue eyes. The boys were nearly all in field-gray uniform cloth—cut down, perhaps, from the cast-off clothes of an elder. Some of them wore boots and round soldier-caps. They carried books and lunch-boxes, knapsack fashion, on their shoulders—"Look, will you—that kid there ain't more'n a yearlin', and they've got him in heavy marchin' order already!" "Yeh,—they start 'em early—that's how come they're the way they are—these Boche."

There were round-faced little girls with straw-colored braids, in cloaks. They did not look poorly fed, like the waxen-faced children the battalion remembered in France. And at every corner there were more of them. The battalion was impressed—"Say—you see all those kids—all those little square-heads! Hundreds of 'em, I'll swear! Something's got to be done about these people. I tell you, these Boche are dangerous! They have too many children—"

One more song—"Long Boy."

One of the very few soldier songs that survived the Atlantic voyage—although it suffered some sea change—was "Long Boy." It ran (with variations):

I'll bring you a Turk an' a Kaiser too, And that's about all one fellow can do.

This file pictured above is cheering his soul in the angle of the bridge at Silly-le-Long, just outside of Cognac Pete's buvette. In a little while an M. P. with no ear for music will run him in.

The sandy land section of Comanche County is one of the best sweet potato producing area in Texas and in the fall of the year thousands of bushels of potatoes are produced. Many believe there is over production because the market is overloaded for a few months. To-day every grocery in Comanche, De Leon, and other towns of the county have bushels of cured potatoes that were shipped in the county from other sections of the State. Many of these are sold to the farmers who produce so many potatoes in the fall, while the rest are sold to Comanche County people, who could just as well be eating our own home grown product at a cheaper price.

There are no better eating potatoes in the country than those grown in Comanche County. The only curing plants that have been established here and they have been a decided success. Comanche needs a big curing plant that is able to take care of all surplus potatoes produced. This would not only insure good eating potatoes for the year round, but would reverse the process of taking money out of the county. To-day the Comanche merchants are sending money out of the county for sweet potatoes that should circulate among our farmers and the merchants would gladly spend this money at home if the proposition to secure a big curing plant could be put over.

From Comanche Chief 49 Years Ago

"Fleas as big as wheat grains permeate the streets of Comanche. Beef steak, loin and roast, 7 c per pound, all other 6 cents, brisket 5 cents. We will endeavor always to keep good meat on hand and try to please our customers—Flamming & Hamm.

"Jennie June says that a fashionable bonnet can be had for a dollar and a half. And so it can. It is the from six to twenty dollars worth of trimming that strikes the pocket book in the sore spot.

"Governor R. B. Hubbard in this issue has printed a proclamation declaring that Comanche County is now free from Indians and that indiscriminate carrying of deadly weapons in said county is endangering the public peace as is shown by a petition signed by the citizens of Comanche county and that the act of 1871 declaring Comanche to be a frontier county, liable to incursions of hostile Indians and permitting the general carrying of deadly weapons is hereby repealed.

"Take notice that the firm heretofore known as Shellworth and Hall is dissolved and that the business will from hence forth be run by J. F. Shellworth.

"Col. W. W. Lawrence will deliver a Fourth of July address to the Greenbackers at Comanche.

"A man from the county made things lively for a few minutes on Friday evening last on the corner near the post office, by giving a young attorney a severe tongue lashing and then whipping the town marshal in an unceremonious manner. The bull of the west, as he termed himself was taken before Esquire Brown and came out as clear as a whistle.

"None but the best brands of liquor carried at the Monarch Saloon. This whiskey is acknowledged by all good judges together with the medical fraternity to be the best and the purest on the market.

"The editor drove his buggy to the H. R. Martin's magnificent farm for the purpose of seeing the self-binding harvester cut and bind wheat. We were surprised to find such a wonderful crop of wheat and more surprised to see it working so smooth and doing such good work. J. W. Greene, Mr. J. W. Lambeth, and a young man were the only men in the field and with the assistance of the machine were cutting and binding and shocking wheat at the rate of 12 acres per day, while in a field near by a common and eight hands were cutting at a much slower rate and wasting double the amount of grain.

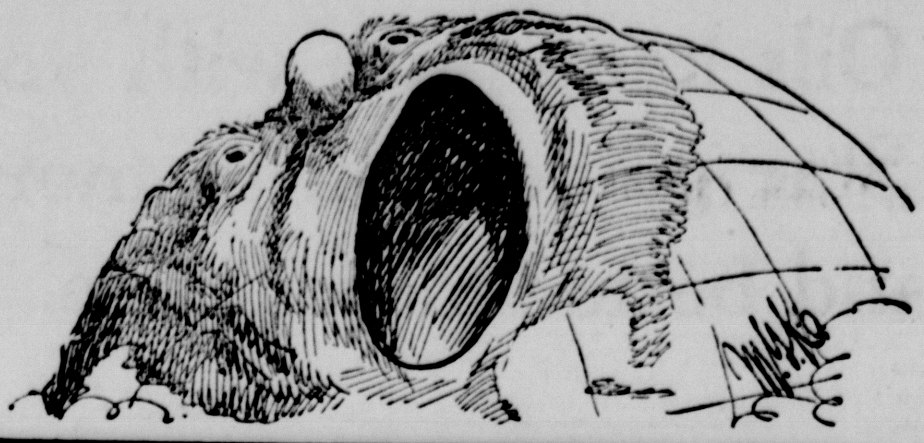

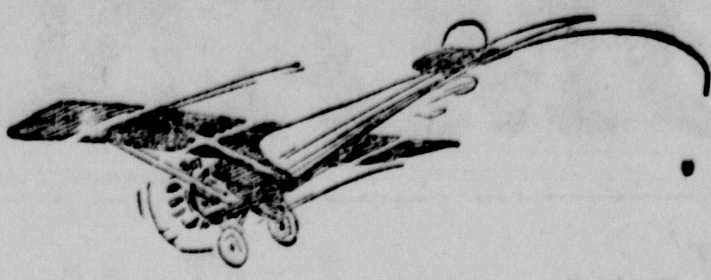

"Wm. Stephens and J. T. Green while returning from a moon light picnic last Thursday engaged in a buggy race over the prairie about 5 miles from town. Stephens horses became unmanageable, turned the buggy, dragging him several feet, inflicting a severe wound on his knee. Fortunately his fair partner, Miss Corum of Clifton, escaped with only a few bruises."

Any one finding a key to a post office box is kindly asked to return the same to one of the employees of the office who will see that it reaches the proper owner.

BOY SCOUT CAMP

The Comanche Troop of Boy Scouts plan to leave for their annual camp on July 11th, and are expecting to be gone eight days. Permission has been given them to camp on the San Saba River in the Ellis Ranch, twelve miles west of San Saba.

It is expected that between twenty and twenty-five Scouts will make the trip. Last year twenty-two Scouts went. The experience gained last year will enable them to conduct a better camp this year, although the camp last year was very good for their first experience. A cook will be taken this year, and the Scoutmaster enabled thereby to give more time to instruction of the Scouts. Each Scout will be required to make a deposit of five dollars with the Scoutmaster not later than July 6th. Notice to this effect was given the Scouts and their parents three months ago, and already several have made their deposits. Any friends of the Scouts who would like to add to their pleasure by contributing something for them to eat can be assured such will be appreciated.

Every Scout who expects to attend this camp is notified to be at the Scout meeting Friday night at eight o'clock. At that time they will receive directions as to what to take with them. Another meeting on Friday, July 1st, will be all before the camp.

N. P. WILKINSON, Scoutmaster.

Mrs. Joe Ross Dead at Monroe

(Contributed)

Mrs. Joe Ross died suddenly at her home at Monroe, La., Tuesday afternoon, June 7, living only seven hours after becoming ill. Her body was brought here for burial, arriving on the Frisco train at two o'clock Thursday, June 9th.

Interment was made at the Pendergrass Cemetery, the funeral services being conducted by the Rev. J. L. Ray and Rev. J. D. Smoot.

Mrs. Ross at the time of her death was twenty seven years old and was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bartlett of Sidney. She was reared near Sidney and left there for Louisiana soon after her marriage about ten years ago. She has been a member of the Methodist church since she was ten years old.

Besides her husband and parents she leaves four sisters, Mrs. R. Barlow, Mrs. T. Walker, Park Tex; Oma Lee and Jesse. Three brothers, Earl Bartlett of Longworth, Texas, Stewart and Billie. All were present.

It is seldom that a person has more friends than Geneva. Her sweet disposition, sunny smile and rare beauty won friends where ever she was known. The many and exquisite floral offerings so lavishly bestowed by friends was a touching testimony of her love and popularity among them.

The entire community extends deepest sympathy to the bereaved family. Out-of-town relatives and friends present were:

Mrs. A. F. Brock Ballinger, Texas, Taut Walker, Park, Texas, Willis Barlow, Fort Worth, Texas, Jim Ross, Bryan, Texas, Dr. R. L. Wood and wife, Monroe, Texas.

John R. (Uncle John) Woodward Dead

John R. Woodward died at his home in Clyde, Texas, Thursday June 9th. Mr. Woodward, who had been in bad health for over a year, took seriously ill about a month ago and had been since confined to his bed.

Interment was made at the Clyde cemetery, the funeral service being conducted by the pastor of the Methodist church. The I. O. O. F. Lodge of Clyde assisted in the services.

John R. Woodward was born in Warren County, Tennessee February 24, 1848. He was the son of a pioneer Methodist circuit rider, the Rev. Isaac Woodward. He was married to Miss Mary Ann Martin in 1869 and moved his family to Abilene, Texas 1889 five years later moving to Comanche, where he lived for over twenty five years.

For a number of years he ran a blacksmith shop here and was one of the best liked men in town. About ten years ago he removed to Clyde, Texas.

He joined the Methodist church at an early age and always took an active part in religious affairs. He was also a member of the I.O.O.F. Lodge in the affairs of which he was always active until his years prevented his activities.

He is survived by his wife and one sister, Mrs. Myra Gribble of Temple, Texas and the following children: Frank Woodward of Clyde, M. E. Woodward of Comanche, M. M. Woodward of Clyde, G. M. Woodward of Tyrone, Okla., and Mrs. Ella Roberts of Phoenix, Ariz. All of the children were present for the funeral service except G. M. Woodward and Mrs. Roberts both of whom arrived in Clyde too late for the services.

DIPPING INTO SCIENCE

Why Hot Iron Bends
Iron, like other materials is made up of molecules—very minute particles—which are always in motion, though, of course, unseen to the naked eye. When iron is hot these molecules develop greater motion and become farther apart because of expansion from heat. They cannot hold together so tightly then, and it is therefore easier to bend the piece of iron.

PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH NEWS

Last Sunday evening the service was conducted out of doors on the church lawn for the first time. The boys of the Sunday School placed the benches and chairs on the lawn and helped to bring them in again after the service. In this they rendered quite a service. The congregation seemed to enjoy the cool of the evening and the soft carpet of grass, and were very attentive during the sermon. Led by Mr. Clarke they sang well old hymns, without the accompaniment of an instrument. The evening service each Sunday will be held on the lawn when the weather permits. More seats will be provided and the lighting improved.

Two weeks ago the Sunday School held its annual picnic in the park near Lake Eanes. A large number went out about the middle of the morning and spent the day. Others came out for dinner and stayed awhile. Fishing, swimming, and games of various kinds furnished the amusement. All declare there never was a better picnic dinner, and since that is such an important part of a picnic the picnic was a big success.

Next Tuesday the Young People's Conference opens at Kerrville Encampment, and several of our young people will leave that morning to attend it. They expect to enjoy the "Hill Country" for eight days, attending conference classes the while, and mingle with from two to three hundred young people.

Next Sunday—Sunday School at 9:45, morning preaching service at 11:00; Evening service on the lawn at 8:15. The public is cordially invited.

Good Yield From Certified Seed

T. H. Luckie of Indian Gap was exhibiting in town Friday some large white cobbler Irish potatoes, which weigh over one pound each and were almost without blemish.

The potatoes were raised from certified seed which he had County Agent Barton to order for him. The seed had been treated for diseases and guaranteed to be producers. Luckie stated that he planted 10 bushels on an acre and a half of ground and that he dug 200 bushels from the patch.

Clifford Flannigan, Comanche, Route four, was taken suddenly ill with a severe case of appendicitis Saturday. He was taken to Gorman to a hospital for operation, where he is now reported as doing nicely.

Dr. W. M. Moore of Sipe Springs is moving to Comanche and will occupy the W. F. Robinson house. He will practice medicine here.

Fine Figs Grown In Comanche

An unusually large fig was brought to the Chief office Monday by Volle Meyers. The fruit was gathered from a three year old tree in the Meyers' yard. Meyers stated that he fertilized the tree well in the spring and gave it water whenever needed. The fig was as large as a turkey egg. The tree is well loaded with fruit which has begun to ripen.

"MARE NOSTRUM" IS IBANEZ' FAVORITE

"Mare Nostrum" (Our Sea), Rex Ingram's first production for Metro-Goldwyn for more than two years, will have its presentation at the Majestic Theatre Monday and Tuesday.

Filmed on the original locations in Spain, France and Italy, so vividly described by Blasco Ibanez in his famous book, with Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno in the feature roles, "Mare Nostrum" has been one of the most widely discussed pictures made in recent years.

Ingram and his company traveled more than 10,000 miles from the time they left New York until the picture was completed in Nice, France.

"Mare Nostrum" is Blasco Ibanez's favorite of all the stories he has written. He refused to allow the picture to be produced until Rex Ingram was able to do it.

Ibanez and Ingram are the author-director combination responsible for the famous production "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." Since that time they have been mutual admirers and close friends. Ingram was one of the first to read "Mare Nostrum" and expressed his enthusiasm for the story. At that time his health was bad and he was unable to undertake such a strenuous task as producing it in pictures. Ibanez held motion picture rights until Ingram was ready to do it.

Alice Terry and Antonio Moreno have the outstanding parts of their cinema careers in "Mare Nostrum." As Freya Talberg, the beautiful spy Miss Terry is superb. Moreno makes the character of Ulysses Ferragut, the Spanish captain, actually live on the screen.

"Mare Nostrum" is a triumph for the author, director and two stars.

HONOR MRS. WARING

Mrs. John D. Waring was hostess to a number of the younger married set on Monday afternoon, honoring Mrs. John D. Waring, Jr. of Corpus Christi.

A Mexican motif was featured in the quaint score cards, while Mexican colors of red and yellow were manifested in the red and yellow dahlias and carnas and other lovely flowers in the reception room.

After several enjoyable games of bridge, Mrs. Vernon Adams was found to have made high score and received a pretty Mexican feather bird picture. A similar award went to Mrs. S. J. Thomas as a cut prize, and to Mrs. John D. Waring, Jr. as honor guest, while Mrs. C. A. Greene received the consolation prize, a piece of Mexican pottery.

Miss Elizabeth Scurry, Susie Belle Smalling, and Louise Beeman served orange ice and coconut macaroons, the firms being red and yellow Mexican hats containing nuts and candies.

Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. T. F. Smalling of Amarillo, Mrs. S. J. Thomas of Austin, Mrs. George Simmons of Abilene, Miss Susie Belle Smalling of Amarillo, and Miss Louise Beeman of Fort Stockton.

ENERGY

The farmers of this community have been very busy the last week or two in their cotton crops and grain fields in order that they might be prepared for the threshing season which begins this week.

The parent Teachers Association met in the home of Mrs. O. C. George last Saturday, June 11. After they had pieced a quilt, refreshments were served to the following: Mrs. Troy Morgan, Russel McGlothlin, B. J. Boydston, R. C. McPherson, S. M. Boydston, Walter Adams, B. M. McPherson, and Mrs. Fred Brannon, also Misses Eula Kemp and Lena Boydston.

Mr. Frank Caraway and family were to Brownwood on Sunday 12, to meet relatives from Wintexas.

bothan Reed who has been with her mother, Mrs. Troy Morgan for the last few months is thinking of returning to Oklahoma next week. Her school will certainly be missed in the community.

The children of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McGlothlin and Earl, little son of Mr. and Mrs. Other Kemp are now recovering from the measles. Our county Missionary Rev. Thorn held services on Sunday June 5 in the Methodist Episcopal church here. The Rev. S. J. Isham held service that night.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McGlothlin entertained the young people with a singing last Sunday night. Every one reported a nice time.

We still have singings on our regular singing evenings (second and fourth Sundays) and cordially invite everybody to come.

SWEET CREAM IS THE BEST MARKET

made from poor producers nor will a herd ever be built up by breeding to scrub or inferior bulls. The average Comanche County milk cow produces less than 100 pounds of butter fat and less than a gallon of milk per day average. Can these kind of cows be made to pay a profit?

Now coming to the part that I was asked to discuss and that is the problems of producing sweet cream. Consumers are more and more demanding a superior and standardized product, and are willing to pay for it. The farmer who insists on marketing unclean milk cream cannot expect a better market than he has now. The sour cream price was 45c in January when the cream kept better. It is now 30c when much of it is rotten. Now if better prices is wanted number one cream must be produced and a market secured by organized effort.

Now the profit from the sale of sweet cream and whole milk is much greater than that of sour cream. Now if one was to make a choice between whole milk or sweet cream it probably would be best to sell sweet cream for then the skimmed milk would be left on the farm for the feeding of calves, poultry and pigs. Then again it is more trouble to deliver whole milk as it is more difficult to keep sweet, greater cost, and has to be delivered at least once a day if not twice. Then the price is only slightly more than fat out of the milk and sold as sweet cream.

So it seems that from the wide demands in Texas for sweet cream products, and the chance that Comanche County farmers have for getting a sweet cream market it is the best outlet. As was stated in last weeks issue of the Chief that Comanche will have a sweet cream market here at Comanche if the volume of sweet cream be sufficient to justify establishing such a market.

Now what is necessary in the production of sweet cream:

1. It is best to keep dairy clean, Manure removed, and keep hair around udder and flanks of cow clipped. Barn does not have to be screened.

2. Will be necessary to keep ice.

3. For small amount could use refrigerator, but best to construct a regular ice box, which will cost about $15.00.

4. Cream should be separated as soon as milked.

5. Take cream and cool in pan or bucket before putting into ice box, by placing it in cool or ice water and stir until all animal heat is out of it, then place in ice box.

6. Do not mix warm and cold cream, but wait until each are thoroughly cold.

7. All milk vessels should be kept clean, and free of all dirt, and other material that will cause milk to sour quickly.

8. Separator should be cleaned after using.

9. Bacteria are the things that make milk and cream sour so it is necessary to keep this down. To do this wash out all milk vessels and cream cans with a good washing compound and then rinse out with a solution of "B-K" with strength of one teaspoonful of gallon of water. This solution can be saved and used over for three or four times.

10. Use hot water on all milk vessels and have water so hot that drying is not necessary.

11. Cream will be required to be delivered at least every other day.

12. Neighborhood, if several are producing sweet cream could take time about bringing in the cream, or sweet cream routes be established.

13. Rates on ice will be given, and cost will be in according to amount of cream produced. Ice should cost $1.50 to $2.00 per week. Those of you who are milking three to ten cows or intend to, look into this sweet cream market possibility as a market for your dairy product.

LIQUID MECHANICOLD FOUNTAIN AT HAMILTON DRUG VERY POPULAR

In drinking at various fountains have you noticed the difference in the taste of the drinks, apparently made the same, the difference is, Carbonization and Refrigeration. A uniform and consistent charge of Carbonic acid gas, at a proper temperature gives you the best drink. This fountain is so arranged and regulated that it forms its own ice through which the water coils run and keeps the carbonated water at around 34 to 38 degrees F., slightly above freezing, or just as cold as ice will make it.

Using the best syrups, concentrates, and fresh fruits obtainable together with the courteous service is another reason for the liquid mechanicold Fountains' popularity.

We extend you an invitation to visit our fountain and avail yourselves of the services of our modern fountain.
